Cross Taught/Cross Listed Course Definition Information

Cross Taught Courses: This is a temporary arrangement at the schedule level. No one section controls the other(s). That is, one course would not be subordinate to the other(s). The subject codes may be different or the same.

Examples of situations where the cross taught indicator is warranted:

- Two sections that have been created for the same course with different credit hours, one being for graduate students and other for undergraduate students.
- Two sections that have been created for the same course, but one was created for students who want to take the lab and the second was created for students who do not want to take a lab.
- Multiple sections of the same course that are taught by the same instructor, but the individual sections have different restrictions. This can occur regardless of the schedule or session type.
- Related courses (such as Painting II, Painting III, and Painting IV) which share studio space.
- A regular course may be cross taught with a topics course that has been given the same title and has the same instructor.
- Multiple topics courses, with the same title and instructor, may be cross taught.

Cross Listed Courses: One section is in control while the others are subordinate. This is a permanent arrangement at the catalog level. The sections must have the same title. For ground courses, these are sections that meet in the same physical location, time, and with the same instructors. The subject codes must be different.
